

Courtney McBride: This girl's never faked it to make it

By Nicole Mandowsky

The Art Institute of Fort Lauderdale is quite fortunate to have Courtney McBride as a student due to her hard work and contribution in making models look like movie stars for various special events and fashion shows held by the Art Institute of Fort Lauderdale. McBride has not only worked in various fashion shows done by the school AIFL Spring & Winter Fashion Shows but also shows like Breast Cancer Awareness fashion show at the Hard Rock, Business wear fashion show at Gulfstream etc.

She is voted as the Make-up Queen in my book, as well as many others. She worked for Mac for three years and has been beautifying friends, family, and models for about 10 years. Along with her make-up talent, McBride is a very special and unique individual who is constantly surrounded by students, friends, and family. McBride is very passionate about her cosmetology expertise and plans to open up a business location in New York with Matthew Anthony Dell'Isola, an established cosmetologist in New York. Their company will be named MAD CAM and will service clients in both Nassau and Suffolk counties of Long Island as well as Manhattan. They will offer personalized services for Brides, Print Ads, Runway models, as well as actors.
